Prayer Labyrinth Installed On Campus

Dedication will take place during Trinity Days, Sept. 23-24

The Fred Meuser Courtyard, located in the outdoor green space along College Avenue between Gloria Dei and Schenk Chapel, has a new permanent fixture. The grey-stoned prayer labyrinth invites pilgrims to reflect, meditate, and commune with the Divine as they move through the patterned pathway. Unlike a maze, one cannot get lost in a labyrinth; there are no dead ends. Instead, pilgrims are invited to walk the bending pathway, representing the twists and turns of life’s journeys, knowing they will eventually be led to the center gathering space. And from there, the center, the path will lead them just as certainly back into the world.

Trinity's labyrinth was years in the making. As our community grieved the 2006 death of Pastor Aaron Blankenhorn (Trinity '03, Capital '99), leaders rallied around the possibility of installing a labyrinth in Aaron's honor, but the 2007 financial crisis delayed those plans. Numerous gifts over the last decade, including those from the Stellhorn and Anderson families, breathed new life into the labyrinth dream.

At 11:30am on Friday, September 24th, as the final event at Trinity Days 2021, our community will gather to dedicate the labyrinth. Please plan on joining us for this very special occasion.

Sacred stories, faithful friends, and Trinity's new prayer labyrinth.

New $50K Grant Advances Access to Seminary

Trinity Receives $50K Grant from Lilly Endowment, Inc.

Living out Trinity’s mission to "form leaders for Christ’s Church at work in the world" compels us to become more fully present in our Central Ohio community. This is because "the world" we are called to includes our neighborhood, Columbus, and the surrounding regions.

A new $50K grant from Lilly Endowment, Inc., as part of their Pathways for Tomorrow Initiative, is assisting the seminary in opening the doors to theological education for local students. The grant is supporting several key pilot and emerging projects including community-based, certificate programming; MTS and M.Div. pathways for students who completed undergraduate degrees as so-called "non-traditional" students; and assessment of institutional barriers for minoritized student groups.

Hope in Unexpected Places: Returning to Seminary during a Pandemic

Student Spotlight: Serena Travis (MTS ‘24)

In late 2020, when the world was shut down, Serena Travis took a phone call that changed her life.

The entrepreneur owns and operates a popular soul food restaurant on the East Side of Columbus. She started The Good Kitchen 614 with her husband in the fall of 2018, at around the same time she started her Master of Theological Studies degree at Trinity.

The couple's food truck, Rolling Kitchen, had cultivated a rich fan-base, and they felt called to open a brick-and-mortar operation. For Serena, the timing was, on the one hand perfect, and on the other, confusing.

They had the perfect location, and all the logistics were falling into place. At the same time, Serena, a longtime member of Union Grove Baptist Church in the King-Lincoln Bronzeville neighborhood of Columbus, was coming to terms with an unmistakable, emerging call to pastoral ministry.

Knowing theological education was her next step, the Hampton University graduate was unsure where to go or how to get started. One day, a friend who was walking alongside Serena during her discernment process drove down East Main Street in Bexley, right past the seminary, and, as she was praying in her spirit, thought, "Why not start school right here in town?"

Serena applied and started at Trinity in fall of 2018. Her experience of seminary was overwhelmingly positive, especially in fall of 2018 when she had the privilege of hearing Trinity Days speaker, the Rev. Canon Kelly Brown Douglas, Dean of Episcopal Divinity School at Union Theological Seminary in New York City and leader in the field of womanist theology.

Serena Travis is a business owner and entrepreneur who returned to Trinity in spring of 2021 to complete her MTS degree.

Forming leaders for Christ's church at work in the world.
However, the joint responsibilities of running a new restaurant and paying for school became too much. She could not grow a new business and pay for seminary. Serena put her pastoral call on hold and dropped out of seminary.

On a wintry day less than a year ago, Serena received an unexpected call from Trinity. She was informed that the seminary would be able to offer a scholarship equal to the full cost of her tuition. Serena burst into tears on the phone, as the dream and calling she once thought dead was resurrected.

Serena’s scholarship was possible because of Trinity’s growing financial health. In the 2020-2021 school year, every degree seeking Trinity student with demonstrated financial need received a generous scholarship from the seminary. Many students, like Serena, received full-tuition scholarships.

Serena’s first semester back on campus was full of activity. A self-proclaimed "shower singer, but nothing else," Serena, under the tutelage of Church Music Professor, May Schwarz, led the community in worship as a soloist at the 2021 Trout Lectures and on Trinity Sunday.

She sat with her classmates in Liberation Theology, studying the classic work of scholars like James Cone while racial trauma and grief mounted in the city. The class watched, in real time, the Derek Chauvin trial verdict. Just minutes later, when Ma’Khia Bryant, a black teenager from Columbus was shot and killed by police, they cried out and lamented together.

Serena has experienced Trinity as a place of formation, education, growth, and change. As a business-owner, community leader, and mother to two teenage daughters, she is continuing her seminary studies part-time.

Soaking up everything she can from class, Serena is forever integrating seminary academics with ministry, business, and every other aspect of day-to-day life. It is a rigorous schedule, but one bearing life-giving, life-changing fruit.

Fall Semester Classes Available to Remote Students

This fall, Trinity students will be back in physical classrooms, but remote students are still welcome. Clergy seeking continuing education, lay leaders seeking additional formation, and others looking to “test the waters” of seminary are invited to participate in fall classes as both auditors and enrolled students. Remote students will be able to video call into on-campus classes, which will be equipped with technology to support an integrative, healthy learning experience for students in the physical classroom and students joining classes in real-time from other locations.

Eco-Theology, Racial Justice and More at Trinity Days

Join us as we welcome alumni and friends back to campus and host Dr. Cynthia Moe-Lobeda, Professor of Theological and Social Ethics at Pacific Lutheran Theological Seminary in Berkeley, California. Dr. Moe-Lobeda's theme: "Being Church Now: The Call, the Perils, the Promise"

Never before has the world so needed the church to be the church. Our moment in time holds perils and potential like no other. These two lectures invite us to explore -- with the hope and courage born of faith -- what it means to trust and proclaim God's liberating, healing love for the world in the face of two harrowing perils: climate change that threatens the lives or livelihoods of billions, and the deadly distorting sin of racism. Our orienting touchpoint will be the promise that, while broken by sin, we are first and forever beloved creatures called to embody God's justice-seeking Earth-honoring love.

In addition to Dr. Moe-Lobeda's lectures, our community will celebrate the opportunity to gather together in person-- in accordance with local public health and safety recommendations. On Thursday, Dean Kleinhans will share a State of the Seminary address; we will worship together; and we are planning to have a special recognition of the class of 2020, who did not have the opportunity to participate in a commencement ceremony.

On Friday, Dr. Rachel Wrenn, Trinity's new Bible professor, will lead a workshop on this year's Advent texts. We will also, at long last, dedicate Trinity's new prayer Labyrinth.

Registration includes the cost of meals and is open at capital.edu/trinity-days/.

Registrations received by September 15th are $75/person ($50/person for retirees and persons in their first 5 years of ministry). After September 15th, registration is $80/person.
